Friendship Festival's village of harmony to return to East County

The 7th Annual International Friendship Festival will take place Saturday and Sunday at the El Cajon Civic Center, 200 E. Main St.

The Civic Center will be transformed into an international marketplace. "Celebrating Cultural Harmony ... Together, We're Better!" is one of the festival's mottos.

This "free to the public," alcohol-free weekend event will feature booths with culinary delights from more than 40 exotic places around the world.

Craft and educational booths also will be set up for shopping and exploring pleasure.

In addition to the 110 booths, continuous live entertainment consisting of native song, music and dance will be provided on two stages. The performers attempt to capture the essence of the shared cultures which exemplify this community.

The Saturday night line-up on the International Stage includes Healii's Polynesian Revue, Bomani Drum and Dance Ensemble, a laser show and dancing to the Legends Doo-Wop n' Roll Revue.

A two-day traditional Native American Indian Pow Wow will exhibit through song, competition and exhibition dance, the sacred ways of the first Americans. Enjoy their craft and food booths while watching the pow wow.

Andean music group, Inkari, will not be performing this year. Altiplano has been invited to fill the slot, performing traditional, mystical music of the Andean mountains of South America.

A new attraction this year is "It's a Kid's World," where children can enter their own world of festivity and fun. Inside these magical gates includes free crafts booths. "Yarn Around the World," "Pasta Palace," and "World Wide Murals, Inc."

Llamas and a Friendship Train are available for rides on the Festival grounds and a llama jump will be provided for jumping fun.

A variety of children's entertainment will be performed on a special stage, and pictures can be taken with a Friendship Festival display board.

Also new this year is a water mister to help stay cool, located near "It's a Kid's World."

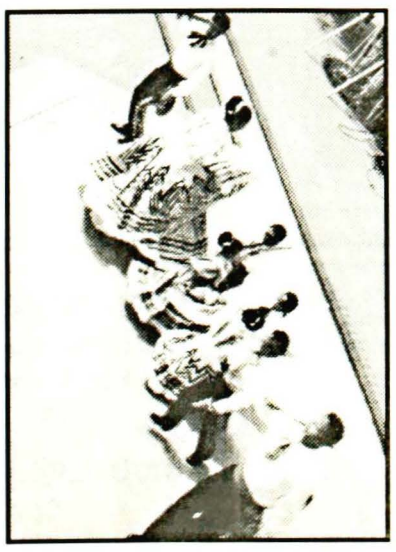
More than 45 artists will display their work in a museum quality, multi-ethnic fine arts exhibit in the lobby of the East County Performing Arts Center.

During the Opening Ceremonies on Saturday at 10 a.m., an official Naturalization Ceremony will swear in 150 new citizens.

In addition, the Closing Ceremony on Sunday at 5 p.m. will include festival coordinators in their ethnic dress, and Pastor Don Hamer and the Sonrise Baptist Church Orchestra and an inspirational Gospel Choir.

The festival is organized by El Cajon city staff and volunteers, and is funded in part by Cox Communications, Eller Media Co., G.E.S. Exposition Services, Viad Corp. Co., P&E Development, Progress Construction, Sycuan Casino, Jacqueline Lee Thomsen, Universal Refuse Removal, and the Viejas Casino & Turf Club.

For more information, call 441-1753.



Fiesta Mexicana will perform traditional Mexican dance Sunday.

Prayer breakfast: Success not always found where the money is Spiritual success and business success seem to have a lot in common — as long as you ignore the bottom line. For example, you might find the spirit moving you to leave a large, secure paycheck to pursue a teaching credential.

More meaningful work was the bottom line for Pat Brown, the former TV and radio personality who addressed Lemon Grove's annual prayer breakfast, co-hosted last week by the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce.

Brown turned down a two-year contract extension with KYXY radio to get a teaching credential. Prior to radio, she was co-host for television's "PM Magazine."

"For 17 years, I was swept up in the world of beauty pageants, TV and radio," Brown told the audience regarding her career switch. "I feel in my heart that I'm doing God's will. It's a strength we often forget to call on."

Brown offered the group a fairly standard motivational pep talk, with lots of rose-tinted one-liners hung on the "Five Ps": positive attitude, persistence, patience, pushing through and prayer.

Without defining "success," Brown described in terms of optimism, hard work and overcoming fear. Contrary to conventional wisdom, she also said success includes taking a break from work.

"Everybody's rushing," she said. "Patience means slowing down and enjoying the view. See how many of you can go the speed limit the whole way when you leave here."

Brown said more and more people are turning toward spiritual success, as evidenced by the popularity of the CBS TV series, "Touched by an Angel." She contrasted the series predicated on divine intervention with tabloid journalism and it's bottom line, "If it bleeds, it leads."

Brown described prayer as admitting one's limitations and allowing divine intervention.

"We have to do our part, but we can only do so much," she said. "We don't know what the future holds, but we can put it in God's hands. Prayer will always lead you to success."

Music for the prayer breakfast was provided by Mount Miguel High School's string and vocal ensembles. Father Ned Brockhaus of St. John of the Cross Church led the invocation and Rev. Carrie Humphrey of Good Shepherd A.M.E. Church led the group in a final song, "Let There Be Peace on Earth."

College playbill begins with '60s story

The Grossmont College Theatre Arts Department will kickoff its season with a production of "Pilgrim," written by Stephen Metcalf and directed by Robert Jordan.

Showtime is 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday, Oct. 8 - 18. There will be additional 2 p.m. performances on Oct. 11 and 18. The show will take place at the Lab Theatre on The Grossmont College Campus, 8800 Grossmont College Dr. in El Cajon.

"Pilgrim" is about one who passes through life in search of some high goal, such as truth. In America, the turbulent '60's was such a time.

The rebellion against hypocrisy and political manipulation that was induced by the Vietnam conflict marked the turning point of the 20th Century. Metcalf's play celebrates the honesty of young Americans as they leave the security of high school for the uncertainty of life.

Tickets go on sale Thursday at the Stagehouse Theatre Box Office. Box office hours are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and one hour prior to each performance. Ticket prices are $10 for general admission, $9 for military, seniors GCCCD Faculty and Staff and $7 for GCCCD students. Call the box office at 644-7234 to make reservations.

Parking is free in lot #1.

Lemon Twist

by Cheryl Cohen

Have a gambling problem? No? Maybe you need to work at it a bit more. There'll be opportunity aplenty at the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce's "Gold Rush Fever" (an evening of gaming, silent auction, raffle prizes and food) on Oct. 11, 7-11 p.m., at the Lemon Grove Senior Center. The cost is $25. per person, and includes $200. worth of gaming chips. If you purchase before Sept. 30, you'll receive $400. worth! I advise that you spend some nights before then playing strip poker in preparation so you won't be shocked on the big night when your follow Lemonites lose their shirts (and all this just to help celebrate the chamber's 50th Anniversary). It may sound like overkill, but Executive Director Mary "Boom-Boom" England says she's desperate. The whining and whimpering won't stop until she gets more gaming table sponsors, and some more goods and services to auction off to the Clabbys. I mean, to the highest bidders (psst! - get the checkbook ready, Tom). Call Boom-Boom at 469-9621 or 466-1111 for more information.

You come home from a long day of work, unlock your door, and the cooped-up hot air from inside the house hits you smack dab in the face. What's the first thing you think of doing? Enjoying a cool shower? Or, glugging down a cold, frosty beer? Hah! Those things are for sissies! If you're really a hard-core Lemonite, you say to yourself, "It's a fine time for baking!" You immediately get to work creating quickbreads, cookies, tarts, and such for the Lemon Grove Historical Society's Traveling Gold Dust Bake Sale, so that you can drop them off at 11:15 a.m. this Saturday in front of the Lucky grocery store on Broadway. Then we buy them (right after getting our six pack inside), take them home, and appreciate the heck outta them in front of our fans and air conditioners.

Who can say "No" to Rosemary Putnam? Trust me, you couldn't. Neither could City Council when she asked them to give up the $500 for Friends of The Library which was budgeted (in a preliminary sort of way) before the end of September. The County Board of Supervisors has committed up to $250,000 this fiscal year for an experimental program, wherein they'll match funds up to that amount from tax-deductible donations from the public. Rosemary figures that with the money they already have on hand, yesterday's book sale proceeds, plus this additional $500, they could turn their $2,000 into $4,000 with the matching funds. The money will probably be released to "Friends", because although it was in a part of the budget (Community Promotions) which is still "to be discussed," it was approved along with the rest of the budget. It's to be used only for books, says Rosemary.

But, what's on the under side of this issue which nobody mentioned at council? Along with the library's $500 budget item, were other worthy recipients, including Project Mini-Town ($5,000), Old Time Days ($5,000), Historical Society ($500) and RSVP ($2,500). Then, we've got the inexplicable ones: Miss Lemon Grove ($1,200) – which was $1,200. more than they were supposed to get last year, on the condition that they were self-supporting this year, The Arts Council ($0), ADAPT ($0), and Miscellaneous ($3,000). These neatly tucked-away items were supposed to have been discussed on July 15, but never were. By approving the budget anyway, any of these organizations, by right, can be funded (or not) without further discussion by council. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to see the inequity in some of these, but nothing can stop them from stepping right up to get their checks, unless the catch-all budget item "Community Promotions" is amended.

If you've got a performance coming up, don't forget to tell The Review, or give it directly to me at 264-3153 (msg.), 264-4180 (fax), or cirious@cts.com (Internet).

This Acronymic Age

How many organizations have a community-minded member who devotes a tremendous amount of time as a representative to affiliate organizations? Our Friends of the Lemon Grove Library has one in the person of Rosemary Putnam, who undertakes to attend meetings of the following organizations:

L.G.F.O.L., (You can guess this one)
L.F.S.D.C., Library Friends of San Diego County
F.O.E.C.L., Friends of East County Libraries.
F.O.L.G.S.D., Friends of Library Groups in San Diego County.
C.A.L.L., Citizens in Action for Local Libraries.

The last named organization has its sights set on getting a favorable vote in June, 1998, for a one-quarter cent sales tax. It takes a two-thirds percent favorable vote to pass such a measure which would affect all of our San Diego Libraries.

More immediately, our Lemon Grove Friends are staging their bi-monthly book sale from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 27, in the library community room and sidewalk at 8073 Broadway.

L.G.F.O.L., Harold Berg, president

Commentary

The old gas pump blues

by Paul Treske

There has been nothing substantial on the subject in any of the media for weeks. The so-called "consumer watchdogs" maintained by several of the TV stations have been unusually quiet about it for some time. Even the newspaper Letters-to-the-Editor never mention it. And yet, it is one of the most outrageous scams perpetrated on San Diego County today.

I'm talking about gas prices!

When they rose during the summer, we all said, "The oil companies are just cashing in on summer vacation driving. Prices will come down after Labor Day." Well, folks, here we are in the waning days of September and prices are still up there in the $1.40 - 1.50 range and in some cases still rising.

Doesn't anyone else feel the same outrage I do? Or have we all, as the oil companies believed we would, simply regeared our thinking to higher prices and moved on to other things? "Can't fight the oil companies," we say. "They've got the stuff and we need it, so they can charge whatever they want."

The oil people are so blatant in their price gouging now, that they don't even bother now to give out their absurd reasons for a twenty cent rise in only three weeks. They use to explain to us simpletons that "Production costs are temporarily up," or "There is a current world-wide shortage of gasoline grade oil." Of course, nobody believed them then so they don't even bother now about their silence, which seems to be saying, "Look, buddy, I'm the only one whose got the gas you need, so I can charge you poor devils anything I want and there's not a damn thing you can do about it." Shades of the old robber barons of earlier American industrial history.

Unfortunately, their feeling is generally true. If you want to drive you have to pay their price. But you can cut your driving down to a necessary minimum, thereby buying less gas. And you can shop around a bit for the best prices, trying to avoid those convenient corner stations that charge $1.51 per gallon for unleaded regular. At times like these, I have no station or branch name loyalty; the cheapest reasonably good gas gets my business.

There is one more thing we can do. When price wars eventually drive prices back to acceptable levels, let's remember which guys gouged us the most and avoid them like the plague. I know it isn't much of a protest ... but it sure makes me feel better.

PG Perspectives

Keepin' it East

by Phillip Giannangeli

My editor keeps after me about direction. He says I tend to stray at times. Not in the text so much as in the location. Unlike that other editor whose advice was "Go west, young many, go west.", my editor keeps telling me "Keep your addled perspective pointing east, Giannangeli, east!" That's not as easy as it may sound, especially if you have a perspective built anything like mine is.

Focusing on East County for today's venture, I guess I can't comment on the Stadium controversy, the Chargers, or the San Diego City Council's adulation of millionaires and the NFL. I also can't make fun of a new baseball park either because I'm pretty sure when they cram it down the throats of San Diego taxpayers no one is going to suggest that it be built out here in East County. So, I guess I have to keep my eyes and ears to that good old East County ground - as difficult and as hot as that may be. Here goes a perspective facing east.

There's the International Friendship Festival this weekend. A Saturday and Sunday filled with entertainment, food, and good spirit- of the nonalcoholic variety. It's a great time for people with different heritages to mix and mingle and get to know one another. It's becoming an East County tradition and one we can be proud of.

What appears to be a developing East County tradition is combative school boards. The fighting isn't between boards; it's within the boards. Some of the recent meetings of some of these boards are more exciting than World Wrestling Federation Championship matches.

Not naming names, we have one board where a member has been known to leave her seat and go into the audience to challenge opposing views. That is quite a feat since she spends an inordinate amount of time patting herself on the back for all the things she says she's done and all the schemes she plans to do. Challenging and patting, while still answering the huge number of phone calls she maintains she gets from supporters, is really quite an athletic achievement. She puts circus performers to shame with her contortions but she's going to need her dancing shoes. A recall movement is underway.

Two other boards are involved in recalls or threatened recalls. Heads have rolled and reputations have been tarnished. One East County board wants to be promoted to the high school level and an administrative leader in a different district was first removed from his job and later unanimously returned to it. The leader in one district isn't going to take the abuse and he's suing his district. Finally, one district leader left and there was never any explanation as to why.

Besides education, East County is all wrapped up in massage parlor politics and radio personality bashing. Mayors, city councils, persons of the cloth, business practitioners, and radio personalities are all involved in these stories. As usual, I think I have the perfect solution. And in case you were wondering, I'm going to tell you right now.

I think that the massage parlors should be forced to play the offensive d.j. material as quiet background entertainment during government meetings conducted in those establishments and presided over by appropriate clergy. Businesses could invest in these multi-purpose endeavors, seeking as they always do to find a profit, and everyone would go home happy, I think.

Still want me to keep my perspective pointed east, Mr. Saint?

Got an opinion? Most people have a few!

Reel Thoughts

Can't tell a movie by its title - or can you?

Watching an opinionated sexist get his comeuppance can be immensely satisfying. That's one reason why a new film comedy has won over film festival audiences nationwide.

The movie's unfortunate title, "Follow the Bitch," refers to a type of card game in which the Queens are wild. All the action takes place during an all-night poker session.

But this isn't an ordinary poker night. Bill (Ray Porter) has hosted a weekly poker game for his friends for the past 10 years. Then, on this particular evening, a new player joins in — a woman (the commanding Mellissa Lechner) who plays better than any of the men. During the course of a very long night, Bill's assumptions about everyone and everything tumble like a house of cards.

Thanks to Andy Friedenberg and the San Diego Cinema Society, the film's stars, writer-director, producers and distributor came together for interviews as part of its theatrical world premiere here in San Diego last week.

Robert Gurney, the movie's distributor, told about discovering the film at a North Carolina film festival. He became so enthused over its "romantic comedy, battle of the sexes" theme that he formed his own company to distribute the movie.

Writer-director Julian Stone admitted that he wrote the movie with people he knew in mind and then cast them in his film. No doubt this explains why the actors seem so comfortable with each other during interviews as well as on the screen.

Porter, a former San Diegan who once worked at Sea World, revealed that Bill, the character he plays with such energy, is really a composite of himself and his director.

Ray Porter (left), Michael Cudlitz and Elizabeth Rainey play it close to the chest in Julian Stone's "Follow the Bitch."

"I didn't have to do much preparation for the role - just be born," he modestly quipped.

Everyone connected with this low-budget film (total cost came to only $100,000) expressed hope that the movie-going public is ready for a film about friendship that urges us to accept changes, let go of the past, and look to the future.

So, if you are tired of movies featuring car chases, explosions and creatures from outer space, "Follow the Bitch" should give you a welcome change of pace.

Travel is a natural right

The D.M.V. reports 411,801 fewer vehicles were registered in the seven months ended June 30, than in the same period last year - a drop of 3.1 percent registration fees shared with cities and counties, a one percent drop costs state agencies about $8 million and local governments another 27 million attributable to mandatory insurance.

"The right to travel (non-commercially) is a natural right (free)-"Shactman v Dulles 225 Fed. 2nd, 938,941. (1956).

"—(I)f the principal and purpose of an act is to produce revenue, then the police power of the state fails, - a license fee with the view to revenue is not the exercise of the police power, but of the power of taxation, (from Cooley's Constitutional Limitations, 6th ed. 242). Only those cases where regulation is the primary purpose can be specifically referred to the police power." Walker v. Bedford 26p (2d) 1051,1053 (Colo.) Also 16 Amer. Juris 2nd p 42. Sec. 365.

"—A police power—as a means of regulation only,—cannot be used as a source of revenue." Robinson v. Norfolk 605 E. 762, 764; Also Amer. Juris 2nd. p42, s.365.

It is hoped the legislature will curtail enforcement of this corporate extortion or the people will seek redress by departing from the currant corporate martial-law venue of commerce to that of judicial common law venue, by first establishing proper name identify and spelling, contrasted to that of the citation, and demanding a 7th Amendment common law jury trial. Any judge denying such is committing civil rights violations against his 14th Amendment military contract and subject to penalties under Title 42 U.S. Code Sections: 1983-85-86, also see Title 18 Sec. 241.

Raise the minimum wage

Associated Press Sept. 17 reported that incomes for parents under 30 have dropped 1/3 over the last two decades. This is happening during an unprecedented boom in the economy and record breaking increases in stocks.

This also explodes several widely circulated myths like "A rising tide floats all ships." It proves that we don't all share in our country's prosperity. It is will continue until something causes it to reverse.

Added to the reduced income is a drop in government programs designed to help low paid families. They will continue to be cut as the attacks on "Big Government" continues.

Since increased prosperity does not insure better conditions for workers, they must look elsewhere for assistance. Historically workers built unions to combat the effects of a free market economy on their living standards. At present unions have been depleted and discredited. What other solution do workers have?

One thing is certain; we all eventually pay the price of reduced income for low and moderate income families as fewer go to college, fewer grow up healthy, crime and drugs increase. Slums replace good neighborhoods and other signs of deterioration grow.

Only government can help. Government is supposed to "Promote the general welfare." We must insure that working families have a living wage by raising the minimum wage to at least the poverty level and restore such services as guarantee the children of such families that they can get the education needed to get ahead. Dead end families are a danger to our society.

More than most people realize

We owe Teresa Wells thanks for calling everyone in Lemon Grove to task for their part in this "communication problem with City Hall." ["Why the communication problem with City Hall?", Sept. 18 issue]. As mayor of this city, I too experience the frustration of asking for, and needing, the opinion of citizens, only to have the same people always answer the call.

However, Ms. Wells cannot be aware of the fact that there is more fruitful communication going on than she knows of. For example, I was invited to a "coffee" at the home of a resident and several of her neighbors. We discussed the problems they were having and some possible solutions. I took this information back to City Hall and was able to take care of some of the concerns. The rest of the city councilmembers also report on calls, letters, etc., they have received from individual citizens and how they have responded.

My feeling is that Lemon Grove citizens are very concerned about what is happening in this city and will get involved especially when it affects them directly. Otherwise, they are content to let their elected city councilmembers make decisions and set priorities. After all, our stands on issues and our visions for this city were publicly spelled out during the elections. Can the handful of folks who appear regularly at Council meetings, with or without their bags of fertilizer, say the same?

We all want the best for this city – we just differ sometimes in how to go about it. It is my belief, and I hope Wells would agree, that open and respectful dialogue between the Council and this city's citizens will lead to more participation by all.

ECEDC doing a great job

Cheryl Cohen's article about the ECEDC Project Lemon Grove ["ECEDC's tangled website off to strange start as city awaits program," Sept. 18 issue] needs some clarification.

Project Lemon Grove and the Connect-ory are, in fact, two separate projects. The $6,300 check that ECEDC received from the city of Lemon Grove was not for the Connect-ory. It was for the 63 manufacturers doing business in Lemon Grove (like our company, Letter-Kraft Printing) to have referral preference on bids that come into ECEDC, participate in seminars and workshops provided to help secure these bids and benefit from their marketing services as well.

Lemon Grove manufacturers are also welcome to use ECEDC's facility should they not have access to a computer or fax service. In addition, detailed in-depth profiles of these businesses are being conducted so that they too will be included in the Connect-ory that has begun with East County businesses.

Regarding the "grants" for the Connect-ory, it was just last week with the official word on the first grant was received. That does not mean that the money has been funded yet and it will be some time before it is available. Meanwhile, ECEDC continues their efforts using the staff available to go forward with this unique concept.

As I said when I spoke in support of Project Lemon Grove and the diligent efforts of Deanna Weeks, Sue Hunter, Jo Marie Diamond and their staff, Letter-Kraft Printing has received many bid opportunities from this program. We have also been profiled, which has helped us to realize different ways to market our services.

I hope that you will take another look at what has been done to benefit Lemon Grove manufacturers and realize that we as manufacturers in this city are very fortunate to have been chosen for this program.

COLLEEN RUIS JACKSON

Editor's note: Since the Connect-ory website still cannot be accessed, we're not sure how you or any other business has benefited from Project Lemon Grove. We believe that is what needs clarification.

Put brakes on bike lanes

The mayor of Lemon Grove is to be commended for recognizing the will of the people and the unfairness of the carport ordinance. Her prompt action in calling for repeal is an instance of representative democracy at work. She now has the opportunity to repeal another unneeded, unfair, onerous and expensive ordinance, the bike lane ordinance.

The ordinance is unneeded because surveys by members of the CIC, the Civic Improvement Committee, have found too few bike riders on streets selected in the ordinance to justify the expense and the disruption of traffic while work is being done.

The ordinance is unfair because many years ago, 15 feet of property was taken from homeowners on Skyline Drive in order to widen a 30-foot roadway (one lane each way) to a 60-foot road (two lanes each way). The new bike lanes will narrow the road, a major traffic artery, back to one lane each way!

The ordinance is onerous because homeowners will not only lose a traffic lane, they will be unable to park their cars in front of their homes.

The ordinance is expensive. The project will cost a minimum of $350,000 to start and future maintenance and overcharges could bring the cost to half a million dollars. Not to be overlooked is the lawsuit potential because of bound-to-be accidents (grist for the mill of the city attorney).

The CIC, so successful in bringing to the council's attention the need for repeal of the infamous carport ordinance, is even more concerned about the Bike Lane Ordinance and a concerted door-to-door effort is being started to let the voters/homeowners know what is in store for them.

And spending money on bike lanes while there are still unpaved, dirt streets, in Lemon Grove and asphalt repairs needed throughout the city is an abuse of the taxpayers whose money will have to pay for all.

Volunteers make Mission Trails happen

by Lora Clark

How can Mission Trails Regional Park, which is four times the size of Balboa Park, be maintained by only four park rangers? And how can they keep the Visitor and Interpretive Center open eight hours a day, seven days a week?

"It's because of our wonderful volunteers," stated Park Ranger Nancy Dollard, coordinator of the volunteer program. "We have 150 people, most of them seniors, who have committed themselves to serve on a regular basis."

The two volunteers pictured have donated a total of 1,000 hours between them.

Dave Kotnik had been climbing Cowles Mountain and riding his bike and walking in the park for 30 years when he read about the volunteer program. He attended the orientation meeting, filled out the application, and joined the ranks.

Betty Neill, who has lived in San Diego for 45 years, has taken her kids, now adults, and her grandchildren to MTRP many times. Eighteen months ago she joined the team of volunteers simply because she wanted to give something back.

Volunteers may choose from seven job classifications.

The first on the list is Visitor and Interpretive Center Volunteer, which means working in the gift shop or at the information desk.

For those who love books, Library Aide is an attractive option.

Outside the building and throughout MTRP volunteers who are members of the Habitat Restoration Crew remove litter from the park. Trail Guides lead nature walks, assist with Eagle Scout projects, and help members of Brownie troops as they work to earn their merit badges.

The Volunteer Patrol, on foot, horseback, or mountain bike, trained in people-contact skills, do public relations work and help regulate activities within the park.

Members of the Trail Rehabilitation Crew maintain the trails and remove and/or add new ones, as needed.

Many former teachers have chosen the job classification of Education Programmer. These volunteers present slide and video programs, give classroom instruction, escort groups through the exhibits in the center, and give educational presentations in the amphitheater.

And some even teach teachers how to teach as they assist in in-service meetings, workshops, and other teacher-training sessions held at the center.

Volunteers may specialize in other areas of expertise.

Mary Harris, former head librarian at SDSU and now retired, serves as chair-person for the library committee, and Dick Johnson, local artist, schedules the art exhibits that enhance the main area of the center.

Volunteers will be kept especially busy as the average number of visitors to the center increases from 100 per day, typical of the summer months, to 250 per day.

"The center is open to all schools, public and private," said Dollard. "We see primarily elementary-aged students, but we're getting some preschoolers, too, so any seniors separated from their grandchildren could certainly be of value in the educational program."

Volunteers are asked to work a minimum of two four-hour shifts each month.

Anyone wanting to join the team may contact Dollard at 668-3279.

Dave Kotnick and Betty Neill are two of the 150 active volunteers who keep the center open and operating smoothly.
